crl-arch.com

A Web Site Designed with Architects, Designers, and Specifiers in Mind

C.R. Laurence (CRL) has launched crl-arch.com, an online source of valuable information for architects, designers and specifiers on the company’s full range of architectural products including CRL, U.S. Aluminum, Tajima, Blumcraft, and Jackson brand products. The web site features hundreds of images of installed projects in both commercial and residential settings, and useful videos. The web site’s menu system is clear and concise, enabling a user to rapidly gain access to product features and benefits, images and specifications, plus a lot more.

“There has been a strong interest in our products from architects and the specification community at large. crl-arch.com will provide them rapid and easy access to information on our entire range of architectural products.” said Lloyd Talbert, President of C.R. Laurence. “The products are organized by CSI divisions and with just a few clicks visitors to the site can find the right product for their application, download the specification, and quickly be on their way.” concluded Mr. Talbert.

crl-arch.com provides easy access to:

- Downloading specifications in either Word or PDF formats
- Images of installed systems, project galleries, and related products
- Engineering and testing reports
- Viewing BIM models
- Viewing LEED® Statement
- Watching featured videos
- Requesting additional information

In addition, crl-arch.com provides details on C.R. Laurence’s range of architectural products including:

- Architectural and Ornamental Metals
- Architectural Railing Systems
- All-Glass Door Systems
- Entrances, Storefronts, and Curtain Walls
- Frameless Shower Doors and Restroom Partition Systems
- Hospitality and Display Hardware
- Special Function Windows
- Wall and Corner Protection
